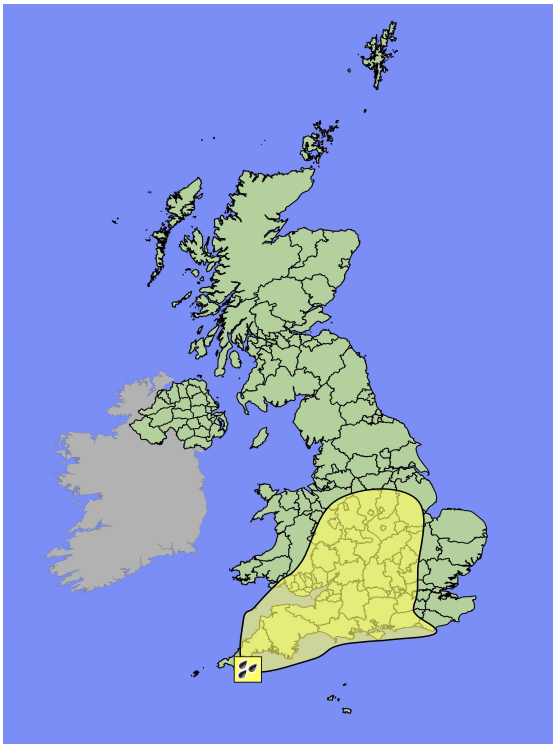
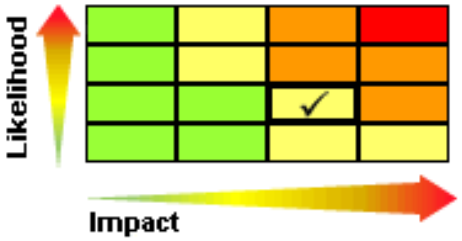
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
An area of warm, humid air is expected to spread from northern France into the English Channel and de-stabilise during Wednesday evening, with heavy, possibly thundery, rain forming into a northeastward moving band. The main uncertainty relates to whether it will be most active over the southwest, or over parts of central southern England and the Midlands. Around 15-25 mm of rain is expected to fall quite widely in a relatively short period of time, with some locations perhaps receiving more than 40 mm.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 21:00 on Wed, 20th Jun 2012 until 16:00 on Thu, 21st Jun 2012

Heavy rain arriving in southwest England on Wednesday evening is expected to spread northeastwards during Thursday morning across parts of England and Wales, with locally torrential downpours. The public should be aware of the risk of surface water flooding and spray on roads.
